

Yann Alibert

NCCR PlanetS - University of Bern

Presentation Title: Comparing models and observations of planetary systems: a machine learning approach

Work Package: WP116 380 Statistical Comparison Between Theory and PLATO Data

Comparing results of planetary system formation models and observations is not trivial, as planetary systems with more than one planet are characterized by high dimensionality parameters. We present in this talk a new method to statistically compare and visualise the architecture of planetary systems.